

Duff Ranch is the link between Wildlake Ranch and Robert Louis Stevenson State Park
Photo credit: Charles O'Rear

Duff Ranch hosts seven plant communities and over 365 species of plants.

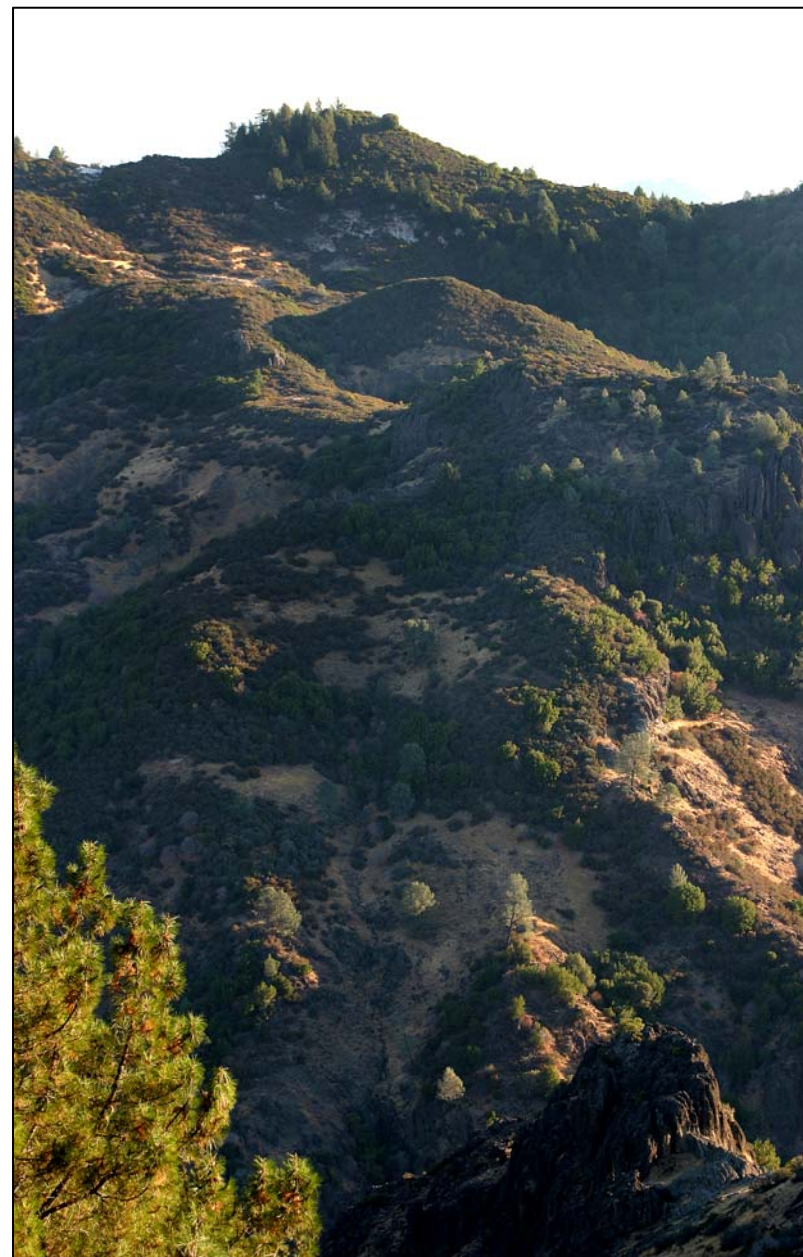

Photo credit: Jake Ruygt

Above top: Redwood Lily (Lilium rubescens) – is a species of limited distribution according to CNPS, occurring in nine counties from Napa to Del Norte County. Populations generally small, containing 3-15 plants. A robust population of at least 30 plants were observed north of Grassy Hill on Duff Ranch Photo: Jake Ruygt

Above bottom: Narrow-anthered California Brodiaea (Brodiaea californica var. leptandra)– is listed by the California Native Plant Society (CNPS) as Rare and Endangered. Photo: Jake Ruygt

Right :Altitudinal gradient and plant mosaic. Photo: Photos by Marissa

Palisade formation on west side of Duff Ranch Property
Photo credit: Photos by Marissa

Spring 2007 Field Trip to Wildlake and Duff Ranches

Standing, from left to right: Chuck Armor, Regional Manager, CA Dept. Fish & Game; Don Monahan, District Superintendent, Diablo Vista District, CA State Parks; Randy Dunn, Major Donor to NV Wild Campaign; Paul Woodward, former co-owner of Wildlake; Helen Kim, Chief Program Officer, Gordon and Betty Moore Foundation; Fred Croshaw, Project Chair, The Land Trust of Napa Co. (NCLT), Carolyn Cromer, Preserve Stewardship Coordinator, NCLT. Front row: John Hoffnagle, Executive Director, NCLT; Ruth Coleman Director, CA State Parks; Michael Mantell, Attorney, Resources Law Group; John Donnelly, Executive Director, CA Wildlife Conservation Board

Photo credit: Denis Sutro

Duff Ranch hosts seven plant communities and over 365 species of plants.
Photo credit: Jake Ruygt

Palisade formation on west side of Duff Ranch Property
Photo credit: Photos by Marissa